Icebreaker Questions:

What comes to mind when you hear the word "gender"?
How would you describe your understanding of gender in one sentence?
When did you first become aware, or recognise of gender as a concept and something flexible not fixed?

General Perspectives:

Do you think society places too much importance on traditional gender roles? Why or why not?
How do you think the idea of gender has evolved in recent years?
Do you feel comfortable discussing gender openly with friends or family?

Personal Reflections:

Have your views on gender changed as you've grown older? If so, how?
Are there any stereotypes about your gender that you find particularly frustrating?
How do you personally define gender identity?

Broader Social Questions:

What role do you think education should play in teaching about gender?
How do you feel media (movies, TV, social media) influences perceptions of gender?
Do you think workplaces are adapting to support people of all gender identities?

Challenging Assumptions:

Some people argue that gender is fluid, while others see it as fixed. Where do you stand on this spectrum?
How do you think society could better support individuals who identify outside the traditional gender binary?
What's your take on the use of pronouns and how they relate to gender identity?

Fun and Hypothetical:

If you could redefine the concept of gender for the next generation, what would it look like?
Imagine a world where gender is entirely irrelevant—how would daily life change?
Do you think colors or hobbies should still be associated with specific genders? Why or why not?